

Your Land, Their Control

Unpacking the risks of Land Carbon Offsets

Carbon offsets: a new claim to your land and forests

Governments and polluting companies are making new claims to people's land and forests based on carbon. This means your land and rights could be at stake.

Created to evade Climate Justice

Land taken for carbon offsets allow rich countries and companies to continue polluting and escape their environmental responsibilities, shifting the burden to the most vulnerable. Your land becomes their solution.

Putting money over people

Many forested countries are seeking financial profits from international carbon markets without legal safeguards and securing tenure rights, leaving their people vulnerable to displacement and exploitation.

Carbon as a new commodity

Carbon markets tied to forests and soils in historically marginalized regions can lead to land grabs and allow outsiders dictate how to use them.

A threat to local communities

A growing number of corporations and governments are making carbon claims tied to land inhabited and used by Indigenous Peoples, local communities, increasing conflicts and threatening their rights and livelihoods.

A story of broken promises

Carbon markets have historically failed to benefit local people
